Love and War

Authors: Dana Tello-Cifuentes, Jun Gong, Will Kolada, Thomas Shalosky

Ages & Players

Ages 12+ | 3 players

Contents

- 21 Hexagonal Tiles
- 6 Love Interest Cards
- 3 Evil Ex Pawns
- 6 Player Pawns (2 per player)
- 3 Sets of Control Tokens (1 per player)
- 1 Evil Ex Control Token Set
- 3 Attribute Trackers (Wit, Charm, Strength)
- 3 Dice (1 per player)
- Rule Sheet

You and two other players compete for territory in the hearts of handsome and beautiful love interests. To win, you must showcase your best attributes, outshine your rivals, and win the affection of your chosen Love Interest before anyone else.

Object of the Game

To win the game, a player must have enough Attribute Points to win the affection of their chosen Love Interest. To acquire Attribute Points, claim territory within the Battlefield of Love!

Game Preparation

First, take the 21 hexagonal tiles and shuffle them into a face-down stack. There are three types of tiles: Starting Tiles, which have only "Start" written on the back, +2 Tiles, which have only "+2" written on the back, and Standard Tiles, which have +1 written on the back. Construct the field in the shape of a heart outlined on the board, placing the right type of tile in each space on the board. Flip over the tiles as you place them.

Next, each player rolls a die to determine turn order. Play proceeds from the player with the highest result to the player with the lowest result. In the event of a tie, players roll again to break it.

Then, give the deck of 6 Love interest cards to the player going last. They choose 1 of the Love Interests and place it face up in front of them, then hand the remaining 5 cards to the next player in reverse turn order. Proceed until each player has selected a Love Interest. These are the lovely people you'll be competing for the affection of!

Each player chooses a color other than purple, then places two pawns of that color on the Starting Tile nearest to them. Then, they take the corresponding stack of heart-shaped control tokens and place one on their Starting Tile.

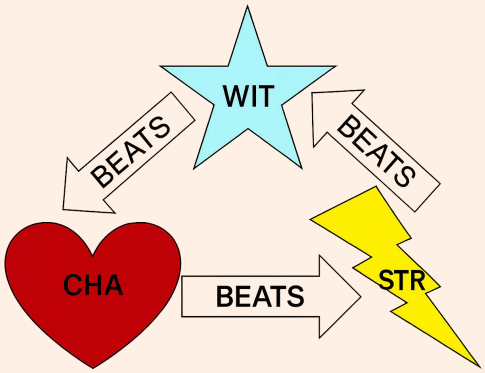
Finally, place the three purple Evil Ex pawns on the +2 tiles in the center of the Battlefield. Set aside the Evil Ex control tokens for the time being. Now you're ready to play the game!

Game Rules

Tiles & Attributes

Each tile yields its owner some number of Attribute Points, as written on the tile. Starting Tiles and Standard Tiles each yield either 1 Wit, 1 Charm (Cha), or 1 Strength (Str). The +2 Tiles beneath the Evil Ex pawns yield 2 Attribute Points! Use the provided Attribute Trackers to keep track of your Attributes (and those of your competitors!). Your total Attribute Scores are determined by all the territory you currently have a control token on.

Each Attribute is strong against another, according to the diagram below. Wit is strong against Charm, Charm is strong against Strength, and Strength is strong against Wit. This is important for resolving battles.



Turn Sequence

On each turn, a player moves one of their pawns to an adjacent tile.

If the tile isn't controlled by anyone, you move there and capture it! Place one of your control tokens on it and add its Attribute Points to your total.

If you control the tile, you move there and your turn ends.

If another player or an Evil Ex controls the tile, you must battle them for it!

NOTE: You cannot move onto another player's Starting Tile!

Conflict: Love & War

Whenever a battle occurs, the attacker and defender will each roll a die, then add a bonus to their roll.

Attacker bonus: The attacker's bonus is equal to their Attribute Score that's strong against the attacked tile's Attribute.

Defender bonus: The defender's bonus is equal to their Attribute Score that corresponds to the attacked tile's Attribute. If an Evil Ex is defending, they always add just 2 to their roll–nothing more, and nothing less. If there is no pawn defending the tile, you do not add a defender bonus!

In the above example, the purple player is attacking a tile owned by the red player. Because it is a Wit tile, the purple player adds their Strength Attribute to their roll, since Strength is strong against Wit. Meanwhile, because the defending player has a piece on the tile, they add their Wit Attribute to their roll.

When a player is attacking an Evil Ex's tile, the player to the attacker's right will stand in for the Evil Ex and roll on their behalf.

Once the total results of both rolls have been determined, the higher result wins the battle! In the event of a tie, the defender wins.

When the attacker wins, the attacking pawn moves onto the tile, capturing it. Return the current control token to its owner and place one of the attacker's on the tile.

If the defender has a pawn on the tile, they retreat it to an adjacent tile that they control without any pieces on it. If they cannot, they return it to their Starting Tile.

If the defender pawn was an Evil Ex, remove the Evil Ex pawn from the game. Then, the remaining Evil Exes capture each unclaimed tile adjacent to them! Place an Evil Ex control token on each of these tiles.

When the defender wins, the attacking piece is returned to the tile it attacked from.

End of the Game

To win the game, a player needs enough Attribute Points to satisfy their Love Interest! This means that for each Attribute listed on their Love Interest card, a player needs at least that many points in that Attribute.
At the end of each round of turns, check to see if anybody has satisfied their Love Interest's requirements. If only one person has, they win the game (and their Love Interest's heart)! If multiple players have satisfied their Love Interest, however, the game continues. The game only ends when, at the end of a round, only one player has satisfied their Love Interest.